Breast cancer is a proliferation of malignant cells that arises in the breast tissue, specifically in the terminal ductal-lobular unit. The term breast cancer represents a continuum of disease, ranging from noninvasive to invasive carcinoma. Screening techniques may detect any of these disease entities as well as noncancerous lesions such as benign breast cysts. This systematic evidence review is prepared for the U. S. Preventive Services Task Force (USPSTF) to update its previous recommendation on breast cancer screening for average-risk women. 1 In 2002, based on results of a systematic evidence review, the USPSTF recommended screening mammography, with or without clinical breast examination (CBE), every 1-2 years for women age 40 years and older. The USPSTF concluded that the evidence was insufficient to recommend for or against routine CBE alone to screen for breast cancer. The USPSTF also concluded that the evidence was insufficient to recommend for or against teaching or performing routine breast self examination (BSE). Breast cancer is the most frequently diagnosed non-cutaneous cancer and the second leading cause of cancer deaths after lung cancer among women in the United States. In 2008, an estimated 182, 460 cases of invasive and 67, 770 cases of noninvasive breast cancer were diagnosed, and 40, 480 women died of breast cancer. The incidence of breast cancer increases with age. Based on Surveillance Epidemiology and End Results (SEER) data from 2002-2004, the National Cancer Institute (NCI) estimates that 14. 7 of women born in the United States today will develop breast cancer in their lifetimes, 12. 3 with invasive disease. The probability of a woman developing breast cancer in her forties is 1 in 69, in her fifties 1 in 38, and in...
