NAN BENNET OR, THE MISERIES OF NEGLECTED EDUCATION! BY A COUNTRY SCHOOLMASTER. Vice is a monster of such frightful mien, That to be hated needs but to be seen. Pope. Doctora Coldwell, a physician as eminent for his benevolence as his practice, was riding near some cottages which stood on a lonely common, when he was stopped by a woman, who begged him, for Gods sake, to alight, and look at a poor child who as dying of the smallpox. The doctor entered the hut, and found a middle-aged woman, apparently the worse of liquor, weeping over a wretched baby. The childs face was covered with pustules, and it lingered in the last stage of that dreadful disorder. Some medicines were readily procured from a neighbouring lady, (who kept a small dispensary for benevolent purposes,) but they were administered in vain; for the wretched object expired in the arms of its worthless parent the same evening. Upon making some inquiry after the stranger, the doctor learnt she was a soldiers wife, and had been abroad with Vol n. Q her husband, who had been slain in the war that she was now travelling home to her native county, still some hundred miles distant, in the expectation of finding some of her relations alive, who might probably...
