Not illustrated. 1902 Excerpt: . . . cobwebs, bedropt with light, And blow to sudden and fragrant bloom The evening-primrose buds at night; They teach the ox-eyes to dance and swing, And top the grass-waves with milk-white froth; They girdle the wasp with a golden ring, And powder with silver the candle-moth. They drape the curtains of morning mist; They bridge with rainbows the cataracts flood; They stripe the pansy, and deftly twist The point of the morning-glory bud; They give the earthquake its awful force; The dread volcano obeys their word; They rouse the whirlwind and shape its course, And bronze the neck of the humming-bird. They round the dewdrop that winks and shines Like a diamond-spark when the grass is wet; They trace with purple the dainty lines In the cup of the shy white violet; They warm the peach with a scarlet streak, And touch its velvet with rich perfume; They redden the ripening apples cheek, And dust the grape with its azure bloom. They brown the acorn and carve its cup; They find the spider her warp and woof; They pack the chestnuts, and bind them up In their prickly covering, squirrel-proof, Until they are perfect, and ripe and sweet; They mark the zone in the clover-leaf; They tint with amber the ripening wheat, And trim its beard for the harvest-sheaf. They store in the melons hard green rind Its cores crisp crimson, all sweet and cool; They teach the silk-worm the way to wind Without a tangle, her...
