X., April, 1878, Ex. Div. Rule 12. The writ was a proceeding within this Rule. There can be no doubt as to the reasonableness of the solicitor in taking advice before issuing the writ. If necessary parties were omitted as plaintiffs in the writ the error could only be set right at a subsequent stage by leave of the Court, and probably on payment of costs. PALLns, C.B.: If the solicitor had commenced such an action without taking counsel s opinion, and the case broke down, he might be liable to his client for negligence. Then as to No. 123, we again rely 11 the rules of 1854. In the schedule to the General Orders of 1854, made under the Common Law Procedure Act, 1853, attendances at Assizes are provided for in items 98--10l. By 98 and 99, the attorney,...
