CHINESE GORDON IN CHINA. Leaving England for China in July, 1860, Captain Gordon did not reach the scene of our military operations there in time to participate in the capture of the Taku Forts. But September saw him at Tientsin, whence the allied forces had already commenced (September 9) their advance on Peking, since the Chinese Commissioners were shuffling in the Chinese manner in regard to compliance with the conditions on which the allies were prepared to suspend hostilities and conclude peace. It was in the course of this movement, while negotiations were still proceeding, and had suddenly seemed prospering when indeed a basis of arrangement had been agreed to, that the representatives of the British Ambassador with their escort, while on their way back to the army from Tungchow after a not unsatisfactory conference with the Chinese Commissioners, were beset,...
