Waiting for Elvis

By Elias, David

Coteau Books, 2008. Paperback. Book Condition: New. Coteau Books 2008 New/ Product Description A tragic story of lives that interconnect at a roadside diner in the wilds of Northern Ontario. The desolation of the landscape is mirrored in the truck stop. Oppression, abuse and alcoholism have left their indelible marks a tableaux of evil, perdition, the fall from grace, and the hope of redemption. And acting as soundtrack to it all is the rattle and hum of the highway of humanity - oily, smelly, loud and deadly, it giveth and it taketh away. In the wilds of northern Ontario, 40-something Betty operates a roadside diner with the help of her oppressive, spirit-killing husband and occasional visits from her genuinely evil son. A drifter with an abusive past of his own passes through their lives, causing Betty to reconnect with her long-dead emotions. Betty was once Elizabeth, the daughter of a refined mother and an ambitious father. Financial ruin brought about her father's suicide and her mother's descent into alcoholism. Betty bears the scars, and struggles to remain human, though others around her have failed. Sal is a wanderer hermit who lives in the woods near Betty's Diner. His mother was an alcoholic...
