Burton of Ohio in the Senate of the United States, May 19, 1914 It is much more constant than our record as regards the relation of the Federal Government to the States or upon tariff or foreign affairs. Nations, like individuals, have their distinctive qualities, opinions, and aspirations which shape their course and determine their standing among the countries of the world. Thus their movements may be forward or backward. They may advance the cause of human liberty or retard its development. They may promote International confidence or breed discord and repulsion. German Idealism has given to nations the attribute of personality. The great Swiss-German publicist, Bluntschli, says: Individual States differ like individual men In spirit, character, and form. While history explains the organic nature of the State, we learn from it at the same time that the State does not stand on the same grade with the lower organisms of plants and animals, but is...
