Will her cheeks be ever rosy, An her hair get shiny bright? What I done? Why I dess washed her Like I see cook do for you; She was oh! so awful dirty, An I fought she would look new. So I put her in the washtub An I scrubbed hard as I could, Made a lot of soapsuds on her, But it didn t do no good. For she won t get clean an whitey Like fings allus do for cook, An the harder at I scrub her She will only worser look. THE NOBLE FIREMEN Clang! clang! The firemen s gong I hear; Dear me! it must be somewhere near; Yes, here they come at tearing pace, And making for this very place. Though not apparent to my gaze, It seems our porch is all ablaze, And up they dash and fall...
